The research purposes of this research were to conduct a comparative analysis of the current most representative online learning platforms for international Chinese education by studying their respective advantages and limitations, and provide suggestions for Chinese learners and the platforms themselves. This thesis selected four online learning platforms for international Chinese education comprised “eBLCU.com”, “Overseas Chinese Language and Culture Education Online”, “Global Chinese Learning Platform” and “ChinesePlus” as the research objects. By using the comparative analysis method, from the perspective of the learners of the platforms, based on a comprehensive examination and comparison of the resources, this thesis discovered that these four platforms had their characteristics in five aspects: course resources, learning functions, personalized services, extended resources, and cost: “eBLCU.com” was outstanding in academic resources of universities, “Overseas Chinese Language and Culture Education Online” focused on cultural communication, “Global Chinese Learning Platform” was extensive and intelligent, and “ChinesePlus” was useful for teachers and interaction. Moreover, it was found that there were common problems in the aspects of course update speed, personalized recommendation accuracy, and resource integration among these platforms. For the suggestions for learners' usage: academic users should choose “eBLCU.com”, Chinese groups should apply “ Overseas Chinese Language and Culture Education Online ”, “Global Chinese Learning Platform” was recommended for ordinary enthusiasts, and those with multiple needs can choose “ChinesePlus”. For the development suggestions of the platforms: optimize the course system, accelerate resource updates, deepen intelligent services, and strengthen quality supervision. It is hoped that the four platforms can learn from each other, complement each other's strengths, survey the user needs, explore and discover a more suitable development model and content for the platform, and jointly promote the efficient and comprehensive optimization of the online development of international Chinese education.
